KC POETRY ON THE MOVE

Call for Poetry Submissions to be part of Kansas City's Celebration of National Poetry Month

(Kansas City, Missouri) – If you love to write poetry and you love Kansas City, we want to hear from you.

The KC Streetcar Authority, Our Daily Nada, the Young Friends of the Kansas City Public Library, and Andrews McMeel Publishing are teaming up to host "KC Poetry on The Move", a community-wide celebration of National Poetry Month in April 2019.

"Our Daily Nada believes that the power of the written word can bring people together. KC Poetry on the Move is a perfect opportunity to connect our love of poetry with the people of Kansas City," said Amy Covitz and Andrea Baca, co-owners of Our Daily Nada, located in the River Market area on the KC Streetcar line.

The application process is now open for submissions of original, Kansas City-themed poems. Winners will be chosen by a panel of judges, and selected entries may have their poems printed and displayed in the KC Streetcars, at KC Streetcar stops, and other venues along the route during the month of April. Winners may also be invited to perform their poems at events throughout April.

"KC Poetry on the Move" is open to poets of all ages and submissions are due March 8, 2019. For full details on submissions, visit www.kclibraryfriends.org/kcpoetry.
